Making a New Year's resolution that lasts

Talie Jane
Special to the Tribune

New Year's resolutions are easy to make, but hard to keep. We resolve to diet and exercise, work fewer late nights and spend more quality time with family. But how many of the resolutions last through February? Crowds at the gym filter out; a French fry or a cookie here and there become ever more frequent; and late nights at the office are reintroduced as routine. Our resolutions don't even last two months!

This year, create a different resolution, one that lasts for years to come. Resolve to redesign, renovate or update your home. Create a home gym (to help maintain your exercise program); design your dream kitchen (to incentivize your diet plan); or give your family room a face-lift (to get in some quality family time). A resolution to update your home can help give you the boost your other resolutions need, too.

2016 is the year to resolve to love your home again. Contact an interior designer to help you see this resolution through the process. Your designer will work with you to ensure the fresh, new look is in keeping with your ever-changing needs. Search the Better Business Bureau or online
